Analyzing the achievements of Kazakhstan, we can say with confidence: the republic has chosen the right development strategy. High results and transformations have been achieved in interethnic harmony, sports, education, aerospace activities, and, of course, the grandiose construction of a new capital can be considered one of the main achievements. If we dwell on the climate of Kazakhstan, it can be noted that over the past 10 years, a gradual increase in air temperature has been observed in the country. And according to scientists, the air temperature will continue to rise in the next ten years. At the same time, the so-called "magnetic" days have become more frequent in recent years. That is, for several days in a row, a fairly high temperature is kept in the air. An increase in such days was also observed this year. So, in the context of one month, one could notice unbearable heat during the day and a sharp cold at night.

Modern Kazakhstan is experiencing a period of national revival; in the report of President N.A. Nazarbayev, the changes in the country are characterized as the revival of national statehood. Folk crafts, folk customs, rituals and national sports, the religion of the titular nation, national education and the Kazakh language, the song genre and versification in the Kazakh language are also being revived.
